Jackson Hole Land Trust Announces New Board Members

Jackson Hole, Wyoming – The Jackson Hole Land Trust is excited to welcome two new community members to the Board of Directors, Fred Staehr and Rod Moorhead. Each will bring a fresh perspective to the Jackson Hole Land Trust Board. Although, their professional backgrounds are unique they both have a long history in Jackson Hole and shared commitment to protecting the open lands of this valley for future generations. These experienced individuals will be a valued asset as the Land Trust continues to conserve the wild beauty of Jackson Hole.

Rod Moorhead has a long history of professional and philanthropic accomplishments. His business acumen and past board experience will be welcome additions to the Board. Rod is retired from Warburg Pincus, a private equity and venture capital firm in New York. Rod is the Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Taft School, a member of Harvard's Overseas Committee on University Resources, a member of the Harvard Medical School Board of Fellows, Co-Chairman of The Stroud Water Research Center, and a trustee of the Brandywine Conservancy. He and his wife, Alice, split their time between New York City and Wilson. In his free time he enjoys fly fishing and fox hunting.

Fred Staehr has been in Jackson since 1966 and spent 40 years teaching mathematics and coaching various sports in the Teton County School District. Over the years, Fred balanced his teaching career with summers on the river as a fishing guide for Crescent H Ranch. Fred has enjoyed many years of skiing, fishing, hiking and hunting in the valley. The Land Trust welcomes Fred's longtime commitment to this community.

The Jackson Hole Land Trust is a private, non-profit organization that works to protect the scenic, ranching and wildlife values of Jackson Hole. Since its inception in 1980, the Jackson Hole Land Trust has protected over 20,000 acres of open lands in and around Jackson Hole. For more information please visit www.jhlandtrust.org.
