2022 ANNUAL REPORT

OCTOBER 1, 2021 — SEPTEMBER 30, 2022

For the Jackson Hole Land Trust, our 2022 fiscal year has been one of reflection. With the turnover of one five-year strategic plan to the next, our board, staff, and advisory councils spent time reviewing and recommitting to our priorities as an organization. We sat down as a team, talked through our accomplishments over 42 years, and looked ahead to opportunities to grow our impact. We sought feedback from you, our partners and supporters, that will shape our conservation efforts for years to come. While we've emerged with a revised strategic plan, our north star remains the same: to protect and steward the wildlife habitat, working lands, and community open spaces of Northwest Wyoming.

Our year wasn't all talk. The JHLT conserved 441 acres of open space across both Teton and Sublette counties and monitored our more than 56,000 acres already under easement. A new 120-acre easement on Vogel Hill protects open space and high-quality big game habitat on the slopes of West Gros Ventre Butte. The JHLT also secured important connectivity between the National Elk Refuge and Bridger-Teton National Forest with a 40-acre easement at Twin Creek Ranch Road. Finally, the JHLT had the honor of partnering with the Mack family to protect their 280 acres up Jack Creek northeast of Bondurant.

The following pages showcase a year of conservation successes and the people who helped us get there. They also represent the conservation legacy this community has created and will continue to build up with our next strategic plan. Thanks to your support, the Jackson Hole Land Trust is proud to be entrusted with the open lands that make this place so special.

Sincerely,

Shawn Smith

MEET OUR NEW BOARD MEMBERS

"When I graduated from college, it was a boom time for geologists. There were a lot of opportunities to live and work in various states. I chose Wyoming because of the beauty, open spaces, wildlife, rocks, and that feeling of something untamed and undiscovered. Some of those things are disappearing in Park County, and I joined the board of JHLT to preserve what attracted me to Wyoming years ago." - Mark Fisher

"I have long been fascinated and inspired by the open, undeveloped land that surrounds Jackson Hole. The ability to connect with nature right outside one's doorstep is what initially drew my family to Jackson. Daily involvement in the natural world is an intricate part of all our lives in this valley, and why I have always admired the Jackson Hole Land Trust's mission, even prior to my involvement with the organization. The Save the Block initiative, my foray into learning about the Land Trust, gave my family and the community as a whole a direct opportunity to make a lasting difference in our town. It was powerful to see the entirety of Jackson Hole unite to preserve that space, and then later interact with it in more ways than any of us could have imagined. The opportunities the Jackson Hole Land Trust provided for that space alone has already impacted many." - Mekki Jaidi

"I am inspired by JHLT's current projects which extend well beyond the Jackson Hole valley. Specifically, I am happy to be a part of the conservation efforts in Park County and the Green River Valley, which work to protect the wildlife migration corridors that surround Jackson Hole. As we know, the Greater Yellowstone ecosystem, which we are a part of, extends well beyond the protected borders of the YNP. And the wildlife we want to protect do not see the invisible lines of our protected easement properties. So, to the extent we can protect these migration corridors, I am glad to know we are protecting the greater ecosystem." - Anita Miles

And thank you, Peg Gilday, JJ Healy, Pete Lawton, Brad Nielson, and Jenn Sparks, for your time, talent, and commitment to conservation as board members of the Jackson Hole Land Trust.

WORKING LANDS in trust

The Jackson Hole Land Trust holds conservation easements that keep families on their land. When price per acre outpaces revenue from farming and ranching, these easements can be a deciding factor in keeping Wyoming's open space in agriculture, contributing not only to our local food systems and wildlife habitat connectivity, but to the daily lives and legacy of the families who steward these vital landscapes.

Through your generosity and partnership, the JHLT has continued to pursue exciting projects that protect the wide-open spaces, ranching heritage, and strong communities quintessential to the character of Northwest Wyoming. This past year, the JHLT secured a 280-acre easement on Jack Creek, made updates to our county-specific resource hubs that connect landowners with management tools and partners, and won $726,050 in grant funding for conservation easements through the Natural Resources Conservation Service's Agricultural Conservation Easement Program.

JACK CREEK

The JHLT's Green River Valley Program secured a new 280-acre conservation easement along Sublette County's Jack Creek, building on three generations of stewardship to protect agricultural heritage, Wyoming's big game migrations, and essential open space just northeast of Bondurant.

Working lands play an integral role in preserving the open spaces which sustain Wyoming's wildlife. Surrounded by the Bridger-Teton National Forest, the ranch lies at the northern end of the 150-mile Red Desert to Hoback mule deer migration corridor. Jack Creek also supports pronghorn and elk migrations and provides crucial winter habitat for moose. Sublette County's agricultural legacy has ensured that ungulates can follow historic movements across the landscape. The easement protects these uses, helping the region's working lands continue to thrive.

The landowners generously donated a portion of the easement's value. Other funding included the Joe Albracht Memorial Migration Fund, Knobloch Family Foundation, the Natural Resources Conservation Service Agricultural Conservation Easement Program, National Fish and Wildlife Foundation, North American Wetland Conservation Act through a partnership with Ducks Unlimited, Wyoming Wildlife and Natural Resource Trust, and Wyoming Game and Fish Department.

WILDLIFE HABITAT in trust

The Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem is the most intact ecosystem in the lower 48 states. From native cutthroat trout on up to grizzly bears, all our region's keystone species remain. Age-old ungulate migrations still carve across ranchlands and open space, thanks to the thoughtful stewardship of generations of people who have called this place home.

Thanks to your support, the JHLT continues to prioritize conservation easement projects that protect migration corridors and safeguard water quality. In our 2022 fiscal year, the JHLT secured an easement at the northern end of the Red Desert to Hoback mule deer migration corridor. By conserving 66 acres of wetlands, the JHLT helped to address downstream water quality issues. We also hosted a virtual happy hour on big game and the value of open space, partnering with the Middleton Lab to share the importance of conservation in maintaining our world-renowned biodiversity for generations to come.

TWIN CREEK RANCH RD

The new 40-acre easement on Twin Creek Ranch Road borders the National Elk Refuge and Bridger-Teton National Forest, permanently safeguarding a crucial link between the elk refuge and surrounding public and private lands in the heart of the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem.

The easement preserves ecologically diverse open space that is vital for big game, large carnivores, raptors, small mammals, and reptiles. Like the elk refuge, the easement area lies within Wyoming Game and Fish Department-designated Crucial Winter Range for elk. Its protection also benefits other big game species such as bison, mule deer, pronghorn, and bighorn sheep that migrate long distances to seek out winter range on the elk refuge and surrounding lands. The new easement will limit disturbance in these crucial areas, preserving habitat quality for big game during times of the year when they are most sensitive.

The property's vegetation filters runoff before it drains into Flat Creek. By limiting development, the easement's diverse landscape contributes to the healthy function of the Flat Creek watershed, and the expanse of wetlands on the elk refuge.

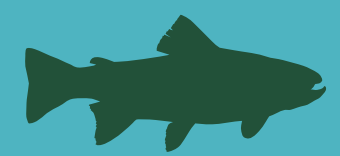

This easement was generously donated by the landowners.

OPEN SPACES in trust

As the least populated state, Wyoming is known for its elbow room. The JHLT is committed to maintaining our iconic open space and sweeping views, while ensuring that people have access to open space through places like R Park and the Greenspace on the Block.

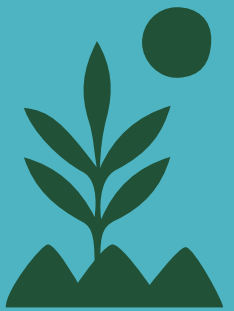

With your help, the JHLT continues to take on conservation projects that benefit the communities in which we work. This past year, the JHLT was thrilled to celebrate the grand opening of the Greenspace on the Block in downtown Jackson. We also reached more people than ever before through our new WYLD membership and our partnerships with the more than 27 local organizations that hosted programs at the Greenspace on the Block and R Park.

VOGEL HILL

The JHLT placed new protections on open space and high-quality big game habitat on 121 acres of West Gros Ventre Butte. The easement enhances landscape-scale connectivity, linking West Gros Ventre Butte to JHLT-protected properties in Spring Gulch and Coyote Canyon while contributing to the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem's overall ecological function.

Vogel Hill's steep, varied terrain offers wildlife refuge from the roads, lights, and human activity below. Rocky cliffs, scattered trees, and shrubs provide a variety of nesting sites for a wide range of birds. East and south-facing slopes provide vital habitat for wintering mule deer and greater sage-grouse populations. Vogel Hill also safeguards an elk migration corridor and mule deer Crucial Winter Range. Gray wolves likely use the property as they move across the valley and mountain lions may utilize the rocky outcroppings as cover, particularly during the winter.

Fisk's Spring, a tributary of Spring Creek, flows through the eastern portion of the easement and provides spawning habitat for Snake River cutthroat trout. Vogel Hill's riparian and wetland habitats support reptiles, amphibians, and resident and migratory birds.

This easement was generously donated by the landowners.

CAN YOU BE OUR HOUSING HERO?
 The stewardship team is seeking short-term housing (6-8 weeks) for a paid summer intern. Providing temporary housing would allow the JHLT to offer this role to a broader range of applicants beginning their careers in conservation. Please contact Director of Stewardship Derek Ellis if you can help: derekellis@jhlandtrust.org.
